

Grinding & Honing the Mitre Knives

The grinding and honing of the mitre knives is very important.

Always have your blades ground in pairs even though only one may be damaged.

Because accidents happen at any time, it is normal practice to have a spair set of knives always ready for immediate replacement.

It is essential that after grinding, the blades are honed to remove any sharp edges and this includes honing the actual cutting edge of the blade.

Honing not only removes any burrs but also produces a very even cutting edge which produces the finest finish when cutting.
